To announce the fourth CAG meeting, an email invitation and postcards were sent, and phone calls were made to the members of the CAG and local, state, and federal representatives. Thirty-six CAG members attended the meeting. Congressman Dan Lipinski was also in attendance and briefly talked about the project and its importance to the area.

The meeting included:

Binder handouts

including alternatives workbook, screening matrix and alternatives evaluation comment sheet recapping public involvement to date, alternatives screening process and alternatives evaluated/dismissed.

A discussion and exercise to review and evaluate remaining alternatives.

Facilitated Discussion and Group Exercises

The second half of the meeting focused on reviewing the developed alternatives categorized into seven groups.

The facilitator explained that each group went through a three-level screening process to narrow down alternatives based on technical criteria and public input. The screening process and evaluation criteria was presented to the CAG for review and general discussion. Based on the results of the screening process Groups 1, 2, 3 and 4 were not recommended for further study while Group 5 and 6 were presented to the CAG for additional consideration.

Members were asked to review and evaluate the remaining alternatives and given time to comment on which alternative(s) from Group 5 and/or Group 6 they would like to see carried forward for further study and impact analysis.
